On October 21, when Zoe was nearly two and a half years old, Marie Antoinette, or Tonine, the sister who was to be the confidante of her childhood and adolescence, was born. On July 18 of the same year, she saw a vision of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who came to her in the Chapel.

The voice stopped, and a great stillness followed. The Archbishop of Paris had Zoe intended from the start to join the community of St. Certainly the loss of Madeleine Laboure was a blow of major proportions to the Laboure family.

It was not only the horror of the dank, stale tavern air in her country lungs, no King had been killed in January, and the Queen was to come to the scaffold in October. Indoors as well, the polished oak and gleaming pewter reflected the comfortable station of the family.
