This The Pesthouse was simple but confusing at times. The story begins with two brothers, Franklin and Jackson, on that eastward migration, but they quickly become separated and the majority of the novel focuses on an understated romance between Franklin and Margaret, a woman he meets at a 'Pesthouse' - a kind of quarantine for people believed to be suffering from 'the flux' as best I can tell, the bubonic plague - one of the ways in which civilisation has regressed is that modern The Pesthouse is not even a memory. With their families killed and with violence and depravity all around them, their love is about all they have to cling onto. The Pesthouse is very light on dystopian setting. After a forgotten eco-reaction in the distant past, the U. Mar 15, Melanie Mel's Bookland Adventures marked it as abandoned. The Middle Ages have returned.
