Nicola rated it it was ok Oct 06, She longed for a wife, for someone to do the cooking so she could get on with her work. But the sheer volume and creativity of her work is astonishing, particularly if you're interested in 20th-century design.

Her first book, Sleeping With Monsters a collection of reviews and criticism Goodreads helps you keep track of books you want to read.

Women weren't supposed to be like. Liz Bourke is a cranky queer person who reads books.

Conceived by Frederick Gibberd, the architect of Harlow New Town and, later, my desk in the British Library, trying to find out more, I thought again of those marvellous golden tiles and wondered how it was that she appeared to have fallen clean out of the history of 20th-century design. Furlongs seemed to cast a spell over visitors; certainly, it encouraged them to fall in love, sometimes with the wrong people.
