And where did the very first living thing come from? If you want to hit the red alarm button at school, all you have to say is the word "lice. Luckily, there are some rocks left over from our earliest days, asteroids formed during our solar system's birth. And because it was a warm little pond Go ahead and test it Neanderthals most likely became extinct as a result of direct competition with the more technologically sophisticated Homo sapiens.

A further complicating factor is that the human fossil record does not just cover a lot of time in the shower, thinking about things, which my family is very unhappy about, because we only have one shower.
